

The Daily Gazetteer.

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 19. 1743.

Arrived a Mail from Holland, another from France, and a Third from Flanders.

Constantinople, Nov. 13.

HE Port is still in the same uncertain Situation with respect to Persia, nor is it possible to know whether we shall have Peace or War; a State so much the more uneasy to the Subjects of this Empire, since they are neither exempted from the Expences necessary to the latter, nor can enjoy the Advantages which naturally result from the former, as not knowing how long it may subsist. The Shah Nadir has shown an Inclination to make use of the immense Wealth which he brought with him out of the Indies, to draw over the Cham of the Crim Tartars to his Interest; but hitherto all the Proposals he has been able to make to that Prince have been rejected; and this occasion'd his entering the Grand Seigneur lately with great Respect, and that he has even condescended to intimate a Desire of referring Peace; our Hopes of which, however, depend so much on his Assurances, as on the certain Accounts we have, that his Subjects are much dissatisfied, and that he has formed a Design of attacking another potentate, with an Army of 150,000 Men.

Moscow, Dec. 27. It is some Months since the Court Intelligence, that Kouli Kan intended to attack the Persians belonging to this Empire on the Caspian Sea, Breach of the Peace made in 1732. Upon this Prince Igorucki was sent that Way with a considerable Force. In his Arrival near Astracan he was surpris'd to find that the Persians had already committed Hostilities, and that the Governor of that Capital was in the utmost Apprehension of seeing himself besieged. The Court on receiving this News ordered immediately 60,000 Men to march towards that City; besides these Regular Troops 10,000 Cossacks, Tartars and Calmucks are to take the Route, and an immense Quantity of Provisions and Ammunition have been sent down the Volga, in order to enable the Inhabitants of Astracan to make a vigorous Defence.

Lisbon, Dec. 18. Saturday last, between 10 and 11 a Clock at Night, the King had another Fit of an Apoplexy. He was immediately blooded, but did not come himself so soon as in his other Fits, and is still in a very weak and languishing Condition. The last great Storm did a vast deal of Mischief, and, amongst the rest, the Vessels that were lost in it, there was a large Dutch Ship of War. The Swedish Ships in our Harbour have made great Rejoicings on account of his Royal Highness, the Duke of Holstein, being declared Successor to the Crown.

Milan, Dec. 29. Some Days since died, at his Residence of Vercelli, Cardinal Ferrerio, Bishop of the said City, of the Dominican Order.

Lisbon, Jan. 5. His Majesty, attended by the Prince of Braganza, arrived here the Day before Yesterday, from Portugal, we are satisfied, that the Intrigues of France attributed full as much as the Forces of Spain, to obstruct his Majesty to quit that Dutchy. It is certain, that the necessary Precautions are taken for augmenting the Army in the Spring, when, without doubt, the French will attempt to force the Spaniards to quit his Dominions, before they have time to think of entering Portugal. It is very certain, that, in the last Action, the Enemy kept the Field of Battle, yet they lost more Men than our Troops did. A Report prevails strongly here, that the Swiss Cantons intend to send his Majesty as many Troops as he may have occasion to use for securing his own Dominions, and this without Pay, or at a very easy Rate.

Genoa, Jan. 5. The last Courier that pass'd thro' this City for Naples, is said to have carried a Commission to Count Mariani, which enables him to command the Spanish Army in Chief; and a Letter to the Count de S. Angelo, requiring him to put the before-mentioned Norman immediately in Possession of his Post.

Vienna, Jan. 9. Count Dbona, the Prussian Minister, has not yet had an Audience of her Majesty, on Account of some Differences which have arisen about the Ceremonial. We are well assured, that the Queen will go in March next to Linz, in order to receive the Homage of the States of the Upper Austria, and that her Majesty will go afterwards to Prague, in order to be crowned Queen of Bohemia. The Vice-Chancellor Count Kotzebue is set out for that City, accompanied by the Prussian Counsellors Jordan and Kamerganski, in order to enquire into the Conduct of the Inhabitants since that City fell into the Hands of the French. General Fesstetiz writes, that the French Army having divided itself into two Columns beyond Egra, in their farther March towards the Naab, he had put himself with his Hussars, in such a manner between them, as to make a Kind of a third Column; that between Prague and the Place from whence he wrote, he had pierced the Columns no less than 13 times, and that of above 1500 Prisoners that he had taken, half had died at their approaching to Egra; which shews how great the Influence of the Cold, and what the Effects of sudden Heat may have been upon the whole French Army.

Ratisbon, Jan. 17. Yesterday, and the Day before, there arrived here abundance of Officers from the Army of M. Belleisle. They agree very well in the Accounts they give us of their March, but then these differ widely from the Account lately published by the Marshal Belleisle; they confess the Loss of abundance of Men in the March, and that many of the rest are disabled. All the necessary Dispositions have been made for putting the French Troops into Winter-Quarters in our Neighbourhood, so as to make it easy for them, and not too expensive for the Country People. But after all this Care has been taken, they seem less disposed than ever to enter into Quarters; but, on the contrary, take such Measures, as would induce one to think they were about to undertake a March; a Proposal was made to her Hungarian Majesty for a Cessation of Arms during the three Winter Months, but it was rejected; and it now appears, that Prince Lobkowitz on one Side, and Count Kevenhuller on the other, are making all the necessary Dispositions for attacking the French with the utmost Vigour. M. Seckendorff is reported to have pass'd incognito thro' this City in his Way to Frankfort Yesterday Morning, and we are assured carries with him a Copy of his most Christian Majesty's last Orders to the Marshals Broglie and Maillebois.

Paris, Jan. 21. It was never known that the Inhabitants of this City wore, in general, a Discontent so apparent as at present. It can no longer be concealed, that the true Reason of our Troops quitting the Banks of the Iser, was their deserting in vast Numbers, which, with the Mortality that has reigned ever since they were in Bavaria, has exceedingly reduced their Number. On the 15th about Noon M. Demoulin, First Physician to the Cardinal Fleury, gave him over. About Seven in the Evening his Eminency lost his Senses to such a Degree, that he did not know Berjac, his first Valet de Chambre and greatest Favourite. In that Condition he received the Extreme Unction, and every body expected he would have died that Night; however, he is since better, tho' very weak and low, and some People affect to doubt whether he is really alive. The Duke of Richelieu is gone to assemble the States of Languedoc. On his Return it is said he will marry Mademoiselle de Chauvelin, one of the Daughters of the late Keeper of the Seals, with whom he will have a Million and half of Livres.

Brussels, Jan. 25. The Duke de Aremberg received on the 17th of this Month an Express from the Baron de Reischach, the Queen of Hungary's Minister at the Hague, and that the Contents of his Dispatches were not very disagreeable, appears from the Behaviour of the Duke upon that Occasion; for he immediately took his Diamond Ring from his Finger and gave it the Courier, with the Addition of a Purse of 100 Guineas, which was all the Money he had in his Pocket. Immediately after a Council of War was held, at the Rising of which the Courier Loiseau was dispatch'd to Vienna, with Orders to make all the Haste thither he could, and a Promise of a very considerable Reward, in case he arrived there sooner than was expected.

Hague, Jan. 23. On the 11th the States of Holland paid to Baron Reischach, the Queen of Hungary's Minister, 480,000 Livres, which is their Proportion of the Subsidy of 880,000 Livres granted to her Majesty by the States-General. Yesterday their High Mightinesses continued their Deliberations; and it is now look'd upon as a Thing certain, that we shall speedily send 20,000 Men into the Austrian Netherlands.

Extract from the Paris Almanac.

Paris, Jan. 23. We continue our Armaments in all the Ports of the Kingdom with extraordinary Diligence, but with what View nobody can tell.

We have certain Intelligence from the Hague, that the States-General have taken on them the securing the Austrian Netherlands, and are going to march thither for that Purpose 20,000 Men.

By Letters from Grenoble we are informed, That a Detachment of Spanish Troops having enter'd a Village in Savoy, where Four of their Companions had been killed, they set fire to the four Corners of the Place, and either burnt or murder'd all the Inhabitants in cool Blood.
